Claim Power is Injured.

Street Railway Company Sues Millers Falls Company.

Carroll & McClintock, for the Greenfield and Turners Falls Street Railway Co., have entered at the clerk of court's office a bill in equity with the Millers Falls Co. as defendants. The plaintiff says that the Millers Falls Co. gave it the right by agreement to build a dam across the Millers river for the purpose of generating electricity for power for operating the Montague Street railway now owned by the Greenfield and Turners Falls Street Railway Co. and that in December, 1903, the Millers Falls Co. raised the hight of its dam lower down the river some two and one-half feet thereby causing the water to set back and interfere with the water wheels and flume of the Greenfield and Turners Falls Street Railway Co. The street railway company say that before this addition was made to the dam the water did not interfere at all with their suction tubes, coming only to the bottom of those tubes, but that now the water comes up into those tubes. They claim their power is very considerably injured.

NewspaperArchive by Storied

Claim Power is Injured: Street Railway Company Sues Millers Falls Company. The Greenfield

Greenfield Gazette And Courier, December 31, 1904 Pg. 1, Greenfield, Massachusetts, US
https://newspaperarchive.com/greenfield-gazette-and-courier-dec-31-1904-p-1/

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)